Rubber Balls

The process of making hollow rubber balls used by children as playthings is quite curious, and may be interesting to those not familiar with it. A Holyoke writer thus describes it:

These balls have a solid surface, are made by a different process from that of making the soft rubber balls which are perforated by an opening, and, of course, are much more firm, durable and elastic. The sheets of rubber prepared for balls are cut into strips of double convex shape. The edges of the strips are moistened with a preparation of rubber and ammonia, by which they are joined firmly together, three of the strips being used for one ball.

This part of the work is done by girls, and a skillful girl can earn about $1.50 per day. When the strips are joined together, the ball is very near the shape of a Brazil nut. Before the last opening is closed a small quantity of carbonate of ammonia is put inside, which, when subjected to strong heat, will make the rubber expand and fill out the ball mold. The opening is then closed with the adhesive mixture, and it is placed in an iron mold of the size and shape of the ball desired. The molds are packed into frames, in which they are subjected to the heat of a vulcanizer.

They are kept in place in the frame by iron rods along the side, and when the frame is full, iron plates at the end are screwed down tightly upon the molds to hold them in place. These iron plates are about three-fourths of an inch thick, and so strong is the expansive force of the rubber in the mold that they bend this thick iron rod into a curve. If one of the molds should work out of place while vulcanizing is in process, the molds would fly out with the report of a dozen pistols, and the work is spoiled.

The action of the heat does the rest. When the molds are opened they contain the perfect round balls, with no marks of the places where the pieces were placed. The tight ridge made by the mold is ground off by a stone used for that purpose, and the ball is done.

Buying at Wholesale.

The other day soon after a Congress street woman had decided to build a big strawberry shortcake for supper, she heard the musical voice of a peddler crying:

"Great big strawberries—eight cents a quart—three quarts for twenty-five cents!"

"Nothing like taking advantage of discounts," said the woman as she ran for a dish, and in five minutes she had her three quarts of berries, and the peddler had her silver quarter.

Time passed on. She sat in a rocking chair looking over the luscious fruit; all of a sudden, she turned pale, and began breathing hard. It was not a case of heart disease or spinal meningitis, nor had a new wrinkle suddenly developed itself on her forehead. She had simply figured:

"Eight cents a quart—three quarts for twenty-five cents—three times eight, is twenty-four!"

Her son came in just as she had slipped a revolver into her pocket and tied her bonnet strings into a square knot, and when he asked her where she was going, she solemnly replied:

"Harry, I am going to kill a strawberry peddler—a seven-story hypocrite and deceiver who gave me wholesale rates on these berries. Tell your father to engage two lawyers, and be at the Central Station in half an hour!"

But the strawberry man had passed on, had sought other shady neighborhoods, and she returned to her darkened home with a toothache under her ear, and her heart beating 115^o in the shade.

CONSIDERABLE commotion on the icy streets and sidewalks was created last evening between seven and eight o'clock by the prolonged clanging of the fire bells, indicating that a furious conflagration was raging in some part of the city. The firemen yanked their apparatus out of the hose houses and made "daisy runs" or slides over the dizzy streets, but they had their trouble for nothing. On investigation it was found that the cause of the vigorous alarm was nothing more nor less than a burning flue at Mr. J. L. Knieper's residence on North Water street. Before the uptown companies had reached North street they received orders to return, and they came back on a double-quick. The flames in the flue were soon subdued, and no one was particularly alarmed except the Knieper family. The red-jackets had a jolly time "running wid der mosehens," and came back in fine spirits.

SAYS the Bloomington Leader of Nov. 29th:

Messrs. Steve McWhorter and Harry Rollins arrived from Terre Haute, Ind., this morning, having closed in their Board of Trade rooms in that city. They were doing business through the Public Produce Exchange, of Chicago, and the failure of that institution necessitated their suspension. The boys were very lucky, however, as they had an inkling of what was coming and closed up all but three deals before the crash. They will leave for Chicago to-night to make new arrangements.

The above named gentlemen arrived in Decatur on yesterday and will probably open a "board of trade" room here. They have made arrangements to receive telegrams over the American Union Line.

Methodist folks are proverbially good feeders. Methodist preachers have fat horses, and generally are fat themselves. At the fair and festival at the tabernacle next week the ladies propose to stuff the people with stuffed turkeys and other excellent stuff that will promote happiness and health. We fancy that the fancy work will be fanciful, the useful will be a first class oriable. For a big feast at a reasonable rate take dinner at the tabernacle on the 10th. The citizens that intend to donate big and valuable articles will find any of the ladies ready to take them in charge, and to dispose of their property.

A light drizzling rain fell here last evening between the hours of five and eight o'clock, but it turned into sheet as it struck the earth. Walking was a bazaar's undertaking, but the small boy was out in a jiffy with his skates, making the most of the free skating rink. For several hours this forenoon pedestrians had considerable difficulty in keeping right side up with care, but so far as heard from no one has been seriously injured by falling. Quite a number of people have taken one or more tumbles but they came down comparatively easy; they gained their feet again and went on their way rejoicing but less confident of their ability to retain a perpendicular position.

The indications are that Prof. A. A. Griffith, who is to lecture on "Faces" at the tabernacle on Monday evening next, will be greeted by a large audience. He comes here under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association, and is highly recommended by the press and pulpit. The lecture, we can promise our readers, will be thoroughly entertaining and instructive. All who may attend will be well paid for their time and expense. Admission, 25 cents; reserved seats, 35 cents, now on sale at Curtis & Co.'s jewelry store.

The probabilities are that Decatur will have an ample supply of soft and hard coal before the end of the week. A long string of empty coal cars passed westward over the Wabash road this forenoon, and a large number of empty cars went south on the Illinois Central road.

The Guards' next invitation ball will be given about New Year's time. They will make it one of the most stunning affairs of the kind ever given in Decatur. In all probability the Champaign 9th Regiment I. N. G. Band will be here.

ON TRIAL FOR MURDER.

Brief Outline of the Brookville (Ind.) Tragedy Enacted on May 3, 1880.

Colonel Robert M. Goodwin, brother of Dr. W. R. Goodwin, of this city, is now on trial at Brookville, Ind., charged with the murder of his brother, Dr. John R. Goodwin. A statement of the tragic affair appeared in these columns a few days after the occurrence. For the benefit of those who have forgotten the facts connected with the shooting, we give the following extract from the Danville News of Nov. 29th:

The crime for which Col. Goodwin stands accused, was committed on the 3rd of May, 1880. He had returned from Indianapolis only four days previous, having then been discharged from the insane asylum. He had not been confined in the asylum on account of insanity, but only to receive treatment as an inebriate. He returned, smarting under the self-imputed disgrace of having been sent to an institution prepared for people of unsound mind. He came fully convinced that his brother John had been instrumental in sending him there, and that he was assisted by Z. T. Hutchinson and Dr. M. C. Armstrong. Against these three gentlemen the Colonel's feelings were hostile, and he sternly demanded revenge for fancied indignity and injury. Returning, his first impulse was to examine and put in proper repair his revolver, a fine weapon, thirty-two caliber, and having satisfied himself in that particular, his next movement was to watch a favorable opportunity. This was afforded him on Monday afternoon, May 3, at about 4:30 o'clock.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette says: Dr. John R. Goodwin was a lay member of the Methodist General Conference, then in session at Cincinnati. He had returned home on Saturday morning preceding his death, and intended returning to Cincinnati Monday evening. In view of such return he left his banking house at about 4 o'clock, with the intention of going to his home to make the proper preparation. But a misfortune awaited him. The wolf was lying in wait for his prey. He was only going home to die. Meeting his brother near the corner of Main street and Central avenue, the Colonel began firing, nor ceased till three bullets had pierced his body in the abdomen and one in the arm. And while tender hands grasped the reeling form of Dr. Goodwin and laid it on a couch, and loving tears were shed above him, the Colonel, the demon, walked leisurely away, carefully leaving his revolver of the useless cartridge case, and apparently as unconcerned as if his victim had been a troublesome cur.

Dr. Goodwin was in his sixtieth year. He was well known and highly respected by all who knew him. His public life was spotless, and at the time of his death his name was favorably mentioned in connection with the gubernatorial office. In Brookville his name was a household word. The poor knew him in more ways than one. He was their benefactor. His life was as a sweet dream, a smooth river, a ray of sunshine, a smooth path, in the Sabbath school, everywhere, he was regarded as a leader.

Public sentiment is largely against the Colonel; and so decided had been the expression of opinion that great difficulty was found to obtain a jury.

The prosecution closed their case on yesterday noon. The defense have entered a plea of insanity. The case will probably be given to the jury this week.

THE earnings of the Peoria, Decatur & Evansville railroad for the first ten months of the present year amounted to $26,089. For the month of October the earnings were $48,298, against $21,896 in October. In this connection we will state that this company has lately received a new officer's car from the Pullman Car Works, at Detroit. Its weight is twenty-six tons, and the wheels are made of compressed paper, with steel tire, forty-two inches in diameter, avoiding all the shaking up which is noticeable on passenger coaches.

It contains one of Baker's patent heaters, one of the best inventions now in use, keeping the temperature the same at any part of the coach as desired. It also contains sleeping apartments for ten persons, a drawing room at one end, and arranged for a pay car at the other, with a massive burglar proof safe. The exterior of this palace on wheels is highly ornamented, and it is pronounced by leading railroad officials as one of the finest on any road in the state.

The indications are that Prof. A. A.

Griffith, who is to lecture on "Faces" at the tabernacle on Monday evening next, will be greeted by a large audience.

He comes here under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association, and is highly recommended by the press and pulpit.
